Reflection

Based on the outputs given by the LLMs, for me, Gemini performed better compared to ChatGPT. The reason why is because the Gemini outputted a resume with further details that they correctly inferred from the prompt, which is me being a geneticist and they correctly inferred that I graduated from Ateneo and majored in Genetics. On the other hand, ChatGPT was given the same prompt, but they outputted a resume that lacked the detail where I majored in Genetics.

The improvements on my final resume, I mostly used the output from Gemini because it is clearer and has more correct details. The only thing I used from ChatGPT is the “additional information” part, to add further details to my resume.

Finally, the thing I learned about prompting is that even with details added to your prompt to further specify what would be the possible output, not all LLMs produce the same output, as is the case here with Gemini AI and ChatGPT. Aside from that, another thing that I learned about prompting is that being unclear with your prompts, like the lack of details to hone a specific output that you would want, would result in an output that may possibly be farther from your intended result.
